

A Nurse's Oath

When a baby's born among the lights
A nurse is always there
With no nights sleep and weary eyes
The child is held with care
Over night the baby's a child
Coughing very sick
A nurse is there to hold his hand
It always does the trick
With broken bones
The child is then a man
With loved ones lost
A nurse does everything she can
The man has now grown old
The next life soon shall be
A nurse will shed a tear for him
When his loved ones are not near
A nurses oath is an unspoken one
Still the duty is very old
These angelic women dressed in white
Have hearts made out of gold

Written by Tatijana Skafar's brother